

PAR

3. Part divided from the rest; separate part.
Lodg'd in a small partition; and the rest
Ordain'd for uses to his Lord best known.
4. That by which different parts are separated.
It doth not follow, that God, without respect, doth teach us to erect between us and them a partition wall of difference, in such things indifferent as have hitherto been disputed of.
Make partitions of wood in a hoghead, with holes in them, and mark the difference of their found from that of an hoghead without such partitions.
The waters underneath from those above Dividing.
Enclosures our factions have made in the church, become a great partition wall to keep others out of it.
At one end of it, is a great partition, designed for an opera.
The partition between good and evil is broken down; and where one sin has entered, legions will force their way.
5. Part where separation is made.
Betwixt the nice partitions of the grails,
The well-united fods so closely lay.
TO PARTITION. v. a. To divide into distinct parts.
PARTLET. n. f. A name given to a hen; the original signification being a ruff or band, or covering for the neck.
Thou dotard, thou art woman tir'd; unroofed
By thy dame partlet here.
Dame partlet was the sovereign of his heart;
He feather'd her.
PARTLY. adv. [from part.] In some measure; in some degree; in part.
That part, which, since the coming of Christ, partly hath embraced, and partly shall hereafter embrace the christian religion, we term, as by a more proper name, the church of Christ.
The inhabitants of Naples have been always very notorious for leading a life of laziness and pleasure, which I take to arise out of the wonderful plenty of their country, that does not make labour so necessary to them, and partly out of the temper of their climate, that relaxes the fibres of their bodies, and disposes the people to such an idle indolent humour.
PARTNER. n. f. [from part.]
1. Partner; sharer; one who has part in any thing; associate.
You greet with present grace,
That he seems rapt withal.
Noble partners
Touch you the sweetest points with sweetest terms.
Those of the race of Sem were no partners in the unbelieving work of the tower.
To undergo Myself the total crime; or to accuse
My other self, the partner of my life.
Sapor, king of Persia, had an heaven of glass, which, proudly sitting in his estate, he trod upon, calling himself brother to the sun and moon, and partner with the stars.
The soul continues in her action, till her partner is again qualified to bear her company.
2. One who dances with another.
Lead in your ladies every one; sweet partner,
I must not yet forsake you.
TO PARTNER. v. a. [from the noun.] To join; to associate with a partner.
So fair, and fasten'd to an empery,
Would make the great'st king double: to be partner'd
With tomboys, hir'd with self-exhibition,
Which your own coffers yield.
PARTNERSHIP. n. f. [from partner.]
1. Joint interest or property.
He does possession keep,
And is too wife to hazard partnership.
2. The union of two or more in the same trade.
Tis a necessary rule in alliances, partnerships and all manner of civil dealings, to have a strict regard to the disposition of those we have to do withal.
PARTOOK. Preterite of partake.
PARTRIDGE. n. f. [from part, Fr. pertris, Welsh; perdix, Lat.]
A bird of game.
The king is come out to seek a flea, as when one doth hunt a partridge in the mountains.

PAR

- PARTURIENT. adj. [parturiens, Lat.] About to bring forth.
PARTURITION. n. f. [from parturio, Latin.] The state of being about to bring forth.
Conformation of parts is required, not only unto the previous conditions of birth, but also unto the parturition or very birth.
PARTY. n. f. [partie, French.]
1. A number of persons confederated by familiarity of designs or opinions in opposition to others; a faction.
When any of these combatants strips his terms of ambiguity, I shall think him a champion for truth, and not the slave of vain glory or a party.
This account of party patches will appear improbable to those, who live at a distance from the fashionable world.
Party writers are so fenible of the secret virtue of an innuendo, that they never mention the question at length.
This party rage in women only serves to aggravate animosities that reign among them.
As he never leads the conversation into the violence and rage of party disputes, I listened to him with pleasure.
Division between those of the same party, exposes them to their enemies.
The most violent party men are such, as, in the conduct of their lives, have discovered least sense of religion or morality.
2. One of two litigants.
When you are hearing a matter between party and party,
if pinched with the cholic, you make faces like mummers,
and dismiss the controversy more entangled by your hearing;
all the peace you make in their cause, is calling both parties knaves.
The cause of both parties shall come before the judges.
If a bishop be a party to a suit, and excommunicates his adversary; such excommunication shall not bar his adversary from his action.
3. One concerned in any affair.
The child was prisoner to the womb, and is Free'd and enfranchis'd; not a party to The anger of the king, nor guilty of The treipsals of the queen.
To be a party in this injury.
4. Side; persons engaged against each other.
Our Foes compell'd by need, have peace embrac'd:
The peace, both parties want, is like to last.
5. Cause; side.
Hegle came in, to make their party good.
6. A select assembly.
Let me extol a cat, on officers fed,
If I have a party at the Bedford-head.
If the clergy would a little study the arts of conversation, they might be welcome at every party, where there was the least regard for politeness or good sense.
7. Particular person; a person distinct from, or opposed to, another.
As the paced on, she was stopped with a number of trees, so thickly placed together, that she was afraid she should,
with rushing through, stop the speech of the lamentable party, which she was so desirous to understand.
The minister of justice may, for publick example, vir-tuously will the execution of that party, whose pardon another, for confanguinity's sake, as virtuously may desire.
If the jury found, that the party slain was of English race,
it had been adjudged felony.
How shall this be compass'd? canst thou bring me to the party?
The smoke received into the nostrils, causes the party to lie as if he were drunk.
The imagination of the party to be cured, is not needful to concur; for it may be done without the knowledge of the party wounded.
He that confesses his sin, and prays for pardon, hath punished his fault: and then there is nothing left to be done by the offended party, but to return to charity.
Though there is a real difference between one man and another, yet the party, who has the advantage, usually magnifies the inequality.
8. A detachment of soldiers: as, he commanded that party sent thither.
PARTY-COLOURED. adj. [party and coloured.] Having diversity of colours.
The fustome ewes,
Then conceiving, did, in yearning time,
Fall party-colour'd lambs.
The leopard was valuing himself upon the lute of his party-coloured skin.
From one father both,
Both girl with gold, and clad in party-colour'd cloth.
Constrain'd him in a bird, and made him fly
With party-colour'd plumage a chattering pie.
I looked

PAS

- I looked with as much pleasure upon the little party-coloured assembly, as upon a bed of tulips.
Nor is it hard to beautify each month
With files of party-colour'd fruits.
Four knives in garb succind, a trusty band,
And party-coloured troops, a shining train,
Draw forth to combat on the velvet plain.
PARTY-JURY. n. f. [in law.] A jury in some trials half foreigners and half natives.
PARTY-MAN. n. f. [party and man.] A factious person; an abettor of a party.
PARTY-WALL. n. f. [party and wall.] Wall that separates one house from the next.
Tis an ill custom among bricklayers to work up a whole story of the party-walls, before they work up the fronts.
PARTYIS. n. f. [Fr.] A church or church porch: applied to the meetings or law-disputes among young students in the inns of courts, and also to that disputation at Oxford, called dispu-tatio in parvis.
PARTVITUDE. n. f. [from parvus, Latin.] Littleness; minuteness.
The little ones of parvitude cannot reach to the same floor with them.
PARTVITY. n. f. [from parvus, Lat.] Littleness; minute-ness.
What are these for fineness and parvity, to those minute animalcula discovered in pepper-water.
PAS. n. f. [French.] Precedence; right of going foremost.
In her poor circumstances, the still prefer'd the mien of a gentlewoman; when she came into any full assembly, the would not yield the pas to the best of them.
PASCHAL. adj. [pasch, French; paschalis, Latin.]
1. Relating to the paslover.
2. Relating to Easter.
PASSE. n. f. [pasa, Spanish.] A kiss.
Thou want'st a rough pass, and the shoots that I have,
To be full like me.
TO PASS. v. a. [passus, Dutch.] To strike; to crush.
With my armed fist
I'll pass him o'er the face.
Thy cunning engines have with labour rais'd
My heavy anger, like a mighty weight,
To fall and pass thee dead.
PASQUE-FLOWER. n. f. [pasquetilla, Latin.]
The flower consists of several leaves, which are placed in a circular order, and expand in form of a rose; out of the middle of which rises a pointy beft, for the most part, with chives, which afterward becomes a fruit, in which the seeds are gathered, as it were in a little head, each ending in a small hair: to which must be added some little leaves, encompassing the pedicle below the flower; as the anemone, from which the pasque-flower differs in the seed, ending in a tail.
PASQUIL. n. f. [from pasquino, a statue at Rome, to PASQUIN. } which they affix any lampoon or paper of PASQUINADE. } satirical observation.] A lampoon.
He never valued any pasquils that were dropped up and down, to think them worthy of his revenge.
The pasquils, lampoons, and libels, we meet with now-a-days, are a sort of playing with the four and twenty letters, without sense, truth, or wit.
TO PASS. v. n. [passer, French; passus, a step, Latin.]
1. To go; to move from one place to another; to be progressive.
Tell him his long trouble is passing
Out of this world.
If I have found favour in thy sight, pass not away from thy servant.
While my glory passeth by, I will put thee in a cleft of the rock, and will cover thee, while I pass by.
Thus will I cut off him that passeth out, and him that returneth.
They took the fords of Jordan, and suffered not a man to pass over.
This heap and this pillar be witnesses, that I will not pass over to thee, and that thou shalt not pass over it and this pillar unto me for harm.
An idea of motion not passing on, is not better than idea of motion at rest.
Heedless of those cares, with anguish stung,
He felt their fleeces as they pass'd along.
dom pass on to him that directed it.
2. To go; to make way.
Her face, her hands were torn
With passing through the brakes.
3. To make transition from one thing to another.
Others dissatisfied with what they have, and not trusting to those innocuous ways of getting more, fall to others, and pass from just to unjust.

PAS

4. To vanish; to be lost.
Trust not too much to that enchanting face;
Beauty's a charm, but soon the charm will pass.
5. To be spent; to go away.
The time, when the thing existed, is the idea of that space of duration, which passed between some fixed period and the being of that thing.
We see, that one who fixes his thoughts very intently on one thing, so as to take but little notice of the succession of ideas that pass in his mind, whilst he is taken up with that earnest contemplation, lets slip out of his account a good part of that duration, and thinks that time shorter than it is.
6. To be at an end; to be over.
Their officious haste,
Who would before have born him to the sky,
Like eager Romans, ere all rites were pass'd.
Did let too soon the sacred eagle fly.
7. To die; to pass from the present life to another state.
The pangs of death do make him grin;
Disturb him not, let him pass peaceably.
8. To be changed by regular gradation.
Inflammations are translated from other parts to the lungs;
a pleurisy easily passeth into a peripneumony.
9. To go beyond bounds. Obsolete.
Why this passes, Mr. Ford—you are not to go loose any longer, you must be pinnioned.
10. To be in any state.
I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant.
11. To be enacted.
Many of the nobility spoke in parliament against those things, which were most grateful to his majesty, and which still passed, notwithstanding their contradiction.
Neither of these bills have yet passed the house of commons,
and some think they may be rejected.
This pernicious project, if passed into a law, would have been of the worst consequence.
12. To be effected; to exist. Unless this may be thought a noun with the articles suppressed, and be explained thus: it came to the pass that.
I have heard it enquired, how it might be brought to pass that the church should every where have able preachers to instruct the people.
When the case required diffimulation, if they used it, it came to pass that the former opinion of their good faith made them almost invincible.
13. To gain reception; to become current: as, this money will not pass.
That trick, said she, will not pass twice.
Their excellencies will not pass for such in the opinion of the learned, but only as things which have less of error in them.
False eloquence passeth only where true is not understood, and no body will commend bad writers, that is acquainted with good.
The grossest suppositions pass upon them, that the wild Irish were taken in toys; but that, in some time, they would grow tame.
14. To be practised artfully or successfully.
This practice hath most shrewdly pass'd upon thee;
But when we know the grounds and authors of it,
Thou shalt be both the plaintiff and the judge.
Though frauds may pass upon men, they are as open as the light to him that searches the heart.
15. To be regarded as good or ill.
He rejected the authority of councils, and so do all the reformed; so that this won't pass for a fault in him, till 'tis proved one in us.
16. To occur; to be transacted.
If we would judge of the nature of spirits, we must have recourse to our own consciousness of what passes within our own mind.
17. To be done.
Zeal may be let loose in matters of direct duty, as in prayers, provided that no indirect act pass upon them to defile them.
18. To heed; to regard.
As for these silken-coated slaves, I pass not;
It is to you, good people, that I speak,
O'er whom, in time to come, I hope to reign.
19. To determine finally; to judge capitally.
Though well we may not pass upon his life,
Without the form of justice; yet our pow'r
Shall do a courtly to our wrath.
20. To be supremely excellent.
21. To thrust; to make a push in fencing.
To see thee fight, to see thee pass thy puncto.
Against each other, and with sword and lance
They lash, they foil, they pass, they strive to bore
Their corselets.